PROGRAM DESCRIPTION

The bachelor in Information Technology, major in Network Administration is centered in the study of network technologies for information professionals, besides bringing up current and important topics for the global business world, like the foundations of network security, among others. This program makes a balance between the communicational and technological skills required to train competitive professionals at a global level, either for the performance in large corporations or for the development of individual entrepreneurship projects in the new technologies area. The courses allow the comprehension of current and emerging technologies, as well as the development of team projects that reproduce the business environment. The graduates will be prepared to guide, supervise, manage and direct processes and technical operations and the personnel involved.

GRADUATE PROFILE

The graduate from the Bachelor in Information Technology, major in Network Management at the Florida Global University (FGU) develops communication and technological competences needed to be competitive at a global level in the new technologies area within large corporations or to develop individual entrepreneurship projects. His training allows him to incorporate changes to the organizations according to the demand of emerging and changing technologies.

UNDERGRADUTE ENTRY REQUIREMENT
